

Cartoons are full of jokes, happiness, and laughter, but are they hurting us? There is a new wave of cartoons upon us and they might be making us dumber. They are cartoons that are intended for an older audience for their vulgar language, insensitive subjects, and no story plots. Their lack of structure and language may be what is making us dumb.

It is believed that adult cartoons like The Simpsons, South Park, and Family Guy are lowering our IQs. In an article by a magazine called geek speak they say that the lack of structure and the fifth grade jokes are making us less intelligent. The writer then goes on to say that the jokes in family guy do not make you think so it does not challenge you intellectually. The author then says that the laziness that the creators of Family Guy have are making us lazy too, they say that their 30 second cut aways is just a cheap gag to get us addicted to their drug of a tv show.

In another article I read it talks about just the impact of watching tv in general is hurting us by making us fatter and more violent. That is not even involving the profanity of the cartoons that are making kids more vulgar. It goes on to say that even shows like Tom and Jerry are affecting kids behavior so imagine what shows like South Park are doing to us. If violence can cause kids to be violent, can stupidity cause kids to be stupid? I think yes, in Family Guy some people may try and copy some stuff what Peter does which is just straight up dumb. What Peter does has no consequences like he would in real life, but instead if you did the same stuff you would probably die. Since we are on the Family Guy topic, I recently watched an episode where Brian becomes dumb. When he does this he basically acts like a 20 year old, which means he following all of the idiotic trends that have come around today. So when you think about it if Family Guy came out around the time of these new trends, maybe the show is making us dumber by giving us new dumber by creating these trends.

Adult cartoons are turning into a epidemic, and we need to end it. They are affecting our children and making them dumber. We must stop watching this show and save our kids. You make your child go to school to get smarter so why would you make them dumber by letting them watch adult cartoons?
